

Minase

It is said that at the end of the 16th century, Minase Kanenari was ordered by Emperor Ogimachi to write calligraphy. This was the start of the Minase family tradition to make shogi pieces that lasted four generations. A series of their pieces were named minase koma and are known as the origin of koma-no-mei.